Some symptoms you may experience after cataract surgery

- Irritation, grittiness or stinging in the eye
- Some superficial bleeding from the eye
- Watering from the eye
- Blurred, foggy or distorted vision
- Some variation in brightness and colours you are able to see
- Your vision may worsen after 24 to 48hours, as some swelling occurs in the eye
- Some discomfort is normal – take paracetamol every six hours as needed
- The pupil in the affected eye may be bigger than usual for one to two days

Symptoms that are NOT normal after surgery

- A shadow coming across your visual field or any flashing lights
- Excessive pain in the eye, especially if it is not controlled by paracetamol
- Progressive worsening of the symptoms mentioned above.

Post-Operative Do's and Don'ts

DO continue your usual activity, avoiding bending forwards and lifting for more than five minutes and avoid heavy lifting

DO wear your plastic eye shield at night for one week.

DO continue your usual medications including glaucoma and other eye drops

DO watch TV and read a book as you wish

DO clean your eyelids with cooled boiled water should they become sticky

DO NOT rub your eyes for a week

DO NOT get shampoo, soap or water into your operated eye for one week

DO NOT have a sauna or go swimming for four weeks

DO NOT wear eye makeup for the first few weeks

If you are uncertain whether you can continue one of your normal activities, please ask us.

DRIVING – if you hold a driving licence:

You may resume driving 24 hours after a local anaesthetic and 48 hours after a general anaesthetic providing that with both eyes open you meet the legal visual requirement for driving. This is the ability to read a number plate at 20 metres and measuring at least 6/12 on the eye chart. You should not drive if you are experiencing any double vision. Please check with an optician if you are unsure.

Remember that you must not drive to your follow up visit because eye drops may blur your vision.
